

Appendix 3A. Multilateral peace operations, 2010

SIGRÚN ANDRÉSDÓTTIR

I. Introduction

This appendix describes developments in peace operations in 2010 and draws on data collected in the SIPRI Multilateral Peace Operations Database to analyse trends in peace operations in the 10-year period 2001–10.¹ The data presented here is a snapshot of ongoing peace operations in 2010 and is meant to serve as a reference point to enable comparative analysis between 2010 and previous years.² Global trends are presented in section II and regional developments in section III. The sources and methods used when collecting the data are described in section IV, followed by details of all multilateral peace operations active during 2010.

II. Global trends

A total of 52 peace operations were conducted in 2010, taking place in 33 locations. One new peace operation was launched in 2010, the European Union (EU) Training Mission in Somalia (EUTM). Two peace operations closed during 2010, the EU Mission in Support of Security Sector Reform in Guinea-Bissau (EU SSR Guinea-Bissau) and the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad (MINURCAT), making 2010 the second consecutive year in which the total number of operations fell, and the third year in which the total fell during the period 2001–10 (see figure 3A.1). However, the upward trend in the total number of personnel deployed to peace operations continued to gather pace, with totals increasing by 20 per cent between 2009 and 2010 to reach 262 842 (see figure 3A.2). Of these, 91 per cent were military personnel, 6 per cent were civilian police and 3 per cent were civilian staff.³ The known total cost of peace operations was $8.9 billion, a 2 per cent decrease from the record high of $9.1 billion in 2009.⁴

Over the period 2001–10 the annual number of peace operations started at 51 then fell to 49 in 2002. The number rose to 60 operations in 2007 and 2008 and then fell again, ending the decade one higher than it started. The number of deployed personnel initially followed a similar trend, as the 2001 level of 123 783 personnel decreased to the lowest level recorded in the period, 102 525, in 2002. However, between 2003 and 2010 deployment levels increased every year. The total of 262 842 in 2010 marked an increase of more than 150 per cent over the 2002 level.

² The figures for personnel deployments given in this appendix are generally estimates as of 31 Dec. 2010 or the date on which an operation terminated. They do not represent maximum numbers deployed or the total number of personnel deployed during the year.

The main reason for this significant increase was reinforcement of the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) operation in Afghanistan run by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO). Its troop level increased from 84 146 in 2009 to 131 730 in 2010, an increase of 57 per cent. For the fifth year running, ISAF was the largest multilateral peace operation. The number of troops deployed with ISAF exceeded the total number of personnel deployed to all other operations combined.

Excluding ISAF from the data on multilateral peace operations yields a different picture for 2010 and for the 10-year period. A total of 131 112 personnel were deployed to the other 51 peace operations in 2010, and the trend in personnel deployments exhibits a slight decline between 2008 and 2010 (see figure 3A.2). Additionally, several peacekeeping and peacebuilding operations either started or scheduled reductions in deployed personnel in 2010 (see section III), indicating that both the number of personnel and the number of operations are set to decrease further. This suggests that the ‘consolidation’ recently observed in UN peacekeeping—a shift from building up new, large operations to transition and even reductions in military components—is also taking place in peace operations run by other organizations.⁵

Conducting organizations

The UN continued to be the main conductor of peace operations in 2010, running 20 operations and deploying a total of 103 404 personnel, or 79 per cent of all personnel deployed to multilateral peace operations other than ISAF (39 per cent when ISAF is included).⁶ After continuous growth in UN personnel numbers since 2002, there was a small decrease in 2010.

NATO conducted three operations and deployed 140 354 personnel, or 61 per cent of the total.⁷ Of these, 94 per cent were ISAF troops. In contrast, the NATO Kosovo Force (KFOR) continued the steady withdrawal of troops, going from 12 662 in 2009 to 8454 in 2010. At 170 personnel, the NATO Training Mission in Iraq (NTM-I) remained at almost the same level as in 2009.

Developments in the operations led by the EU and the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) were in line with the consolidation trend. The EU conducted 12 operations in 2010 (closing one and opening one) but decreased its total personnel deployment by 10 per cent to just over 4500, compared with 5000 in 2009. The OSCE conducted seven operations in 2010, one fewer than in 2009, and slightly decreased the number of personnel deployed to those seven operations from 369 to 363.

The African Union (AU) was the only organization besides NATO to significantly increase its personnel deployments, reinforcing its only current operation, the African Union Mission in Somalia (AMISOM), from 5271 in 2009 to 7999 in 2010.⁸

⁶ Only international personnel are included in the statistics presented here. See table 3A.2 for numbers of local staff supporting each operation.

⁷ Personnel deployed with the NATO Training Mission in Afghanistan (NTM-A) are included in ISAF personnel figures. Details on the number of personnel and national contributions can be found in the SIPRI Multilateral Peace Operations Database (note 1).

The Communauté économique des États de l'Afrique centrale (CEEAC, Economic Community of Central African States), the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) and the Organization of American States (OAS) all conducted one operation each. Six operations were conducted by ad hoc coalitions (see tables 3A.1 and 3A.2 below).

Personnel contributions

ISAF deployments greatly influence the ranking of countries contributing military personnel (troops and military observers) as of December 2010 (see figure 3A.3).⁹ When ISAF is included, the USA was by far the largest contributor of military personnel, providing 90 013 of the total of 238 291 deployed by 111 countries. It was followed by Pakistan, the United Kingdom, Bangladesh and India. When ISAF deployments are excluded, a total of 106 561 military personnel were deployed by 105 countries as of December 2010. The largest contribution was made by Pakistan, which provided 9594 personnel. Of the top eight contributors of military personnel, four were Asian countries and four African. All sent troops exclusively to UN operations; of the top 10, only Italy and France participated in non-UN operations.

⁸ The AU-UN hybrid operation UNAMID, which is led by the UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations, is counted as a UN operation in this appendix.

As of December 2010 a total of 16 385 civilian police were deployed with peace operations by 108 countries, an increase of 13 per cent over 2009. UN operations accounted for 88 per cent of deployed police, roughly the same proportion as in 2009. The largest contributor was Jordan (see figure 3A.4). The rest of the top 10 contributors were in Asia or Africa, and these two regions accounted for 56 per cent of the police deployed.

Contributions by emerging powers

During the past 10 years some non-Western powers with fast-growing economies—notably Brazil, China, India and South Africa—have matched a growing assertiveness at the regional and international levels with increasing participation in peace operations.¹⁰ These four countries increased their share of total personnel deployments from 5.1 per cent in 2001 to 14.5 per cent in 2010 (India remains by far the biggest of contributor of the four). They also significantly increased the number of operations in which they participated.

India is the 3rd largest contributor of military personnel and civilian police to UN operations, Brazil the 13th largest, South Africa the 14th largest and China the 15th largest. After a major increase in 2003, Brazil's deployment levels remained steady until another sharp rise in 2009 (see figure 3A.5) with the strengthening of the UN Stabilization Mission in Haiti (MINUSTAH), in which Brazil leads the military component. China's personnel deployments started rising sharply in 2002 but, in common with overall UN deployment levels, they appear to have remained virtually unchanged since 2008 (see figure 3A.6). Although India was already a significant troop contributor, Notes: Due to the availability of data, the personnel numbers only include troops and civilian police. The numbers of operations include all operations, even those to which Brazil contributes only observers or civilian staff.

In 2003 Brazil contributed 44 troops to 1 European Union mission. All other contributions shown were to UN operations and consisted overwhelmingly of troops.

between 2002 and 2005 it more than trebled its personnel contributions. Its contributions have gradually decreased each year since 2006 but remain above the 2005 level (see figure 3A.7). South Africa's contributions started sharply increasing in 2002. Its level of contributions has fluctuated, falling between 2004 and 2006 and then increasing sharply again in 2007, since when its contributions have risen slightly each year (see figure 3A.8).

Notes: Due to the availability of data, the personnel numbers only include troops and civilian police. The numbers of operations include all operations, even those to which South Africa contributes only observers or civilian staff.

In 2001–2003 South Africa contributed troops to an ad hoc coalition operation and in 2003 it contributed troops to an European Union operation. All other non-UN contributions were to African Union operations.

III. Regional developments

Africa

The number of personnel deployed in Africa in 2010 decreased by 1 per cent compared to 2009 and the number of operations there fell from 10 to 9. That the number of operations and deployment levels in Africa—the region in 2010 with the largest number of peace operations (see table 3A.1) and 65 per cent of non-ISAF personnel deployments—decreased compared to 2009 both reflected and reinforced the consolidation trend in peacekeeping.

The UN continued to be the main conductor of peace operations in Africa. During 2010, three of its operations faced significant political challenges and had to respond to the removal of formal consent by the host government. In 2009 the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) requested a plan for the progressive drawdown of the UN Organization Mission in the DRC (MONUC) to be submitted by June 2010, the 50th anniversary of Congolese independence. A compromise solution was reached in 2010 under which the operation was transformed into a stabilization mission—renamed the UN Organization Stabilization Mission in the DRC (MONUSCO)—and a portion of its troop contingent was withdrawn.¹¹

Consent for the UN Operation in Côte d'Ivoire (UNOCI) was called into question after the head of the operation publicly declared that opposition candidate Alassane Ouattara had won disputed presidential elections held in November 2010. The incumbent, Laurent Gbagbo, refused to step down and both candidates claimed the presidency. In December Gbagbo formally demanded the withdrawal of UNOCI and Operation Licorne, the UN-mandated, French-led force supporting UNOCI. The UN Security Council instead renewed UNOCI's mandate, temporarily reinforcing it with units from the UN Mission in Liberia (UNMIL). MINURCAT was terminated in December 2010 following a request by the Chadian Government in January for MINURCAT forces to be withdrawn from Chadian territory. The government took over responsibility for providing security for civilians in the east of the country, including refugees from the Darfur region of Sudan, internally displaced persons and humanitarian personnel.¹²

Alongside the scaling down of MONUSCO and the closure of MINURCAT, there are further indications of a reduction in the UN presence in Africa. UNMIL has completed the third phase of its drawdown plans. After the 2011 presidential and legislative elections in Liberia the UN will decide on UNMIL's future deployment levels.

After a period of stability and successful elections in Burundi, the UN Integrated Office in Burundi (BINUB) plans to reduce its personnel size in 2011 and is currently developing benchmarks to determine its future configuration.¹³ The EU SSR mission in Guinea-Bissau closed in September 2010 after completing its mandate of providing assistance to local authorities for the implementation of the national SSR strategy. Finally, the small EU Training Mission in Somalia, which was launched in 2010, is due to close in 2011. It is mandated to strengthen and support Somali security forces. Training activities under the EUTM take place in Uganda.

One operation in Africa, AMISOM, saw a significant increase in personnel. With a deteriorating security situation in Somalia, AMISOM's force size was increased by 50 per cent from 5221 troops in December 2009 to 7902 in December 2010. However, this falls short of both AMISOM's original authorized force size of 8000 troops and the new force size of 12 000 troops authorized in December 2010.¹⁴ Since AMISOM has remained significantly below its authorized size since its launch in 2007, it seems unlikely that the AU member states will be able to fulfil the new authorized personnel levels.

Asia

For the second year running, Asia was the region to which the most peace operation personnel were deployed, with ISAF accounting for 97 per cent of personnel deployed in the region. Excluding ISAF, there was a slow but steady decrease in numbers of personnel and operations in the region between 2001 and 2010.

Two operations in Asia maintained the same levels of personnel in 2010 as in 2009, the EU Police Mission in Afghanistan (EUPOL Afghanistan) and the Regional Assistance Mission to Solomon Islands (RAMSI). The International Security Force (ISF) in Timor-Leste halved its personnel size between 2009 and 2010 in response to increased stability in the country and the progress

¹⁴ UN Security Council Resolution 1910, 28 Jan. 2010; and UN Security Council Resolution 1964, 22 Dec. 2010. In Oct. 2010 the AU had authorized an even greater increase to 20 000 troops and 1680 police. made by local security institutions. With the increased responsibilities of the local police force, the UN Integrated Mission in Timor-Leste (UNMIT) started a reconfiguration of its police force in early 2010 and will continue gradual personnel reductions over the next two years.¹⁵

Agreement was reached in 2010 to terminate the UN Mission in Nepal (UNMIN) in 2011. UNMIN was mandated to assist in monitoring the management of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) and to provide technical support for election preparations. After months of political crisis, the conflicting Nepalese parties reached an agreement to complete the remaining tasks under the CPA by January 2011.¹⁶

Europe

Although the number of operations in Europe remained the same as in 2009, personnel deployments decreased significantly for the second year running, dropping by 22 per cent between 2009 and 2010. This was mostly due to restructuring and downsizing of KFOR and to the continued withdrawal of troops of the UN Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) during 2010.¹⁷

The Americas

Two operations continued in the Americas in 2010. An earthquake in January 2010 destroyed Haiti's fragile infrastructure and displaced more than 1 million people. In order to provide stability, the UN Security Council increased both the military and the police personnel levels of MINUSTAH.¹⁸ The short-term aims of this reinforcement were to maintain law and order and to prepare for municipal and presidential elections during the year. MINUSTAH's long-term task will be to rebuild the national police force and strengthen the capacity of the state's rule-of-law institutions.

The Middle East

In 2010 the Middle East saw no significant developments in peace operations. The number of operations remained the same, at 10, and the number of personnel roughly the same as in 2009, at 16 255. The UN Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) continued to be the largest operation, accounting for 76 per cent of personnel deployed in the region.

IV. Table of multilateral peace operations

Table 3A.2 provides data on the 52 multilateral peace operations that were conducted during 2010, including operations that were launched or terminated during the year. The table lists operations that were conducted under the authority of the UN and operations conducted by regional organizations and alliances or by ad hoc (non-standing) coalitions of states that were sanctioned by the UN or authorized by a UN Security Council resolution, with the stated intention of (a) serving as an instrument to facilitate the implementation of peace agreements already in place, (b) supporting a peace process, or (c) assisting conflict-prevention or peacebuilding efforts.

SIPRI follows the UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) description of peacekeeping as a mechanism to assist conflict-afflicted countries to create conditions for sustainable peace. Peacekeeping tasks may include monitoring and observing ceasefire agreements; serving as confidence-building measures; protecting the delivery of humanitarian assistance; assisting with the demobilization and reintegration processes; strengthening institutional capacities in the areas of judiciary and the rule of law (including penal institutions), policing, and human rights; electoral support; and economic and social development. Table 3A.2 thus covers a broad range of peace operations, reflecting the growing complexity of operation mandates and the potential for operations to change over time. The table does not include good offices, fact-finding or electoral assistance missions, nor does it include peace operations comprising non-resident individuals or teams of negotiators, or operations not sanctioned by the UN.¹⁹

The operations are grouped in the table by the entity conducting them and listed chronologically within these groups. UN operations are divided into three subgroups: 14 observer and multidimensional peace operations run by the DPKO; 5 special political and peacebuilding missions; and the joint AU/UN Hybrid Operation in Darfur (UNAMID). The next seven groups include operations conducted or led by regional organizations or alliances: the AU (1 operation), CEEAC (1 operation); the CIS (1 operation); the EU (12 operations); NATO (3 operations); the OAS (1 operation); and the OSCE (7 operations). The final group includes 6 UN-sanctioned operations led by ad hoc coalitions.

New states joining an existing operation in 2010 are shown in bold type. Individual state participation that ended in 2010 is shown in italic type. Designated lead states (i.e. those that either have operational control or contribute the most personnel) are underlined for operations that have a police or military component. The legal instruments underlying the establishment of an operation—UN Security Council resolutions or formal decisions by regional organizations—and the date of first deployment of the operation are given in the first column. Where operations were launched in 2010 the legal instrument is shown in bold type. Where operations closed in 2010 the legal instrument is shown in italic type.

¹⁹ A full description of the definitions, methodology and sources for the SIPRI Multilateral Peace Operations Database is available at <<http://www.sipri.org/databases/pko/methods/>>.

The figures for approved personnel numbers listed are those most recently authorized for 2010. Numbers of locally recruited support staff and volunteers are not included in the table but, where available, are given in the notes. For EU operations, the approved total civilian personnel number is given in the civilian police row. Complete information on national contributions to the operations can be found in the SIPRI Multilateral Peace Operations Database.²⁰ The category ‘observers’ includes both military and civilian observers.²¹

Personnel fatalities are recorded since the beginning of an operation and in 2010. Known causes of death—whether accidents, hostile acts or illness—are recorded for fatalities in 2010. As causes of death were not reported for all deaths in the year, these figures do not always add up to the total annual fatality figure. While the UN provides data on fatalities of locally recruited staff, other organizations or alliances do not.

Costs are reported in millions of US dollars at 2010 prices. The budget figures are given for the calendar year rather than for financial years. Costs for the calendar year are calculated on the assumption of an even rate of spending throughout the financial year. Budgets set in currencies other than US dollars are converted based on the International Monetary Fund’s aggregated market exchange rates for 2010.²² The costs recorded for UN and OSCE operations are the amounts budgeted. The figures provided for other operations represent actual spending.

The costs recorded for UN operations are core operational costs, which include the cost of deploying personnel, per diem payments for deployed personnel and direct non-field support costs (e.g. requirements for the support account for peacekeeping operations and the UN logistics base in Brindisi, Italy). The cost of UN peacekeeping operations is shared by all UN member states through a specially derived scale of assessed contributions that takes no account of their participation in the operations. Political and peacebuilding operations are funded through regular budget contributions. UN peacekeeping budgets do not cover programmatic costs, such as those for disarmament, demobilization and reintegration, which are financed by voluntary contributions. The costs recorded for operations conducted by NATO only represent common costs. These include mainly the running costs of the NATO headquarters (i.e. costs for civilian personnel and costs for operation and maintenance) and investments in the infrastructure necessary to support the operation. The costs of deploying personnel are borne by individual contributing states and are not reflected in the figures given here. Most EU operations are financed in one of two ways: civilian missions are funded through the Community budget, while military operations or operations with a military component are funded by contributions by the participating member states through the

²¹ The UN DPKO now refers to this category as ‘experts on mission’.

²² Details on the budgets of peace operations are available from the SIPRI Multilateral Peace Operations Database (note 1).

Athena mechanism.²³ For CIS operations no figures are provided as there is no designated common budget, and countries participating in the missions bear the cost of troop deployments. In operations conducted or led by other organizations, such as by the OAS or ad hoc coalitions, budget figures may include resources for programme implementation.

For all these reasons, the budget figures presented in table 3A.2 are estimates and the budgets for different operations should not be compared.

Unless otherwise stated, all figures are as of 31 December 2010 or, in the case of operations that were terminated in 2010, the date of closure.

Data on multilateral peace operations are obtained from the following categories of open source: (a) official information provided by the secretariat of the organization concerned; (b) information provided by the operations themselves, either in official publications or in written responses to annual SIPRI questionnaires; and (c) information from national governments contributing to the operation under consideration. In some instances, SIPRI researchers may gather additional information on an operation from the conducting organizations or governments of participating states by means of telephone interviews and email correspondence. These primary sources are supplemented with a wide selection of publicly available secondary sources consisting of specialist journals, research reports, news agencies, and international, regional and local newspapers.

²³ The Athena mechanism is an instrument for the administration of common costs in EU operations with military or defence implications. The mechanism was agreed in Council Decision 2007/384/CFSP of 14 May 2007, Official Journal of the European Union, L152, 13 June 2007; and updated by Council Decision 2008/975/CFSP of 18 Dec. 2008 establishing a mechanism to administer the financing of the common costs of European Union operations having military or defence implications (Athena), Official Journal of the European Union, L345, 23 Dec. 2008.

UN Truce Supervision Organization (UNTSO)

UNTSO was established by SCR 50 (29 May 1948) and mandated to assist the Mediator and the Truce Commission in supervising the truce in Palestine after the 1948 Arab–Israeli War. In subsequent years it also assisted in observing the General Armistice Agreement of 1949 and the ceasefires in the aftermath of the 1967 Six-Day War. UNTSO cooperates with UNDOF and UNIFIL. A positive decision by the UN Security Council is required to terminate the operation.

UNFICYP was established by SCR 186 (4 Mar. 1964) and mandated to prevent fighting between the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot communities and to contribute to the maintenance and restoration of law and order. Since the end of hostilities in 1974, the mandate has included monitoring the de facto ceasefire (Aug. 1974) and maintaining a buffer zone between the two sides. Mission for the Consolidation of Peace in the Central African Republic (MICOPAX)

MICOPAX was established by a decision of the 2002 Economic and Monetary Community of Central Africa (CEMAC) Libreville Summit (2 Oct. 2002) in order to secure the border between Chad and the Central African Republic (CAR). The mandate was expanded at the 2003 Libreville Summit (3 June 2003) to include contributing to the overall security environment, assisting in the restructuring of the CAR's armed forces and supporting the transition process. Coinciding with the transfer of authority on 12 July 2008 from CEMAC to CEEAC, the operation's mandate was expanded again to include promotion of political dialogue and human rights. The operation is mandated for 6-month periods, renewable until 2013.
