

Appendix 3A. Multilateral peace operations in 2007

KIRSTEN SODER

I. Global developments

A total of 61 peace operations were conducted in 2007, two more than in 2006 and the highest number since 1999.¹ This continues a rising trend since 2002, when 48 operations were carried out (see figure 3A.1). The known costs of peace operations also continued to rise in 2007 and the number of personnel deployed to such operations reached an all-time high of 169 467.² This appendix draws on data collected in the SIPRI Multilateral Peace Missions Database to analyse the trends in peace operations in 2007.³

The number of personnel deployed to peace operations in 2007 was 2.5 per cent more than in 2006 and 60 per cent more than in 2003 (see figure 3A.2). Of the deployed personnel, 150 651 were military and 18 816 were civilian. The United Nations remained the largest actor in peacekeeping, conducting 22 operations—its largest number since 2000—deploying 90 305 personnel during 2007. The UN's police deployment reached an unprecedented high of 11 077 officers at the end of 2007. In addition, a new record of participating countries was established during 2007: 119 countries contributed troops, military observers or police. While Timor-Leste and Vanuatu withdrew their contributions, Burundi, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Cyprus, Kazakhstan, Libya, Mauritania and Palau started to deploy personnel to UN peace operations. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) deployed the second highest number of personnel—57 930—in three operations. NATO-led operations were supported by all member countries and by 16 non-member countries, which were responsible for about 7.5 per cent of personnel assigned to the three operations.⁴ Together, UN and NATO operations accounted for more than 85 per cent of personnel deployed. The African Union (AU), with 7371 personnel in three operations, rose to third place in terms of personnel deployed. All three of these organizations increased their total personnel deployments during 2007. In contrast, at 2819 in 10 operations, the number of personnel deployed by the European Union (EU) was 5900 fewer than in 2006 and the lowest number since the EU

² The figures for personnel deployments given in this appendix are generally estimates as of 31 Dec. 2007 or the date on which a mission closed. They do not represent maximum numbers deployed or the total of personnel deployed during the year.

⁴ Non-NATO member countries that contributed to NATO-led operations during 2007 were Albania, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Croatia, Finland, Georgia, Ireland, Jordan, Macedonia (Former Yugoslav Republic of), Morocco, New Zealand, Sweden, Switzerland and Ukraine.

started conducting peace operations under the European Security and Defence Policy in 2003. Seven of the 10 EU operations were conducted outside Europe.

The great majority of personnel were deployed to a handful of large operations. With 41 741 troops deployed during 2007—8200 more than in 2006 and 32 800 more than in 2005—the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) in Afghanistan remained the largest operation in terms of personnel. The second largest, the UN Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (Mission des Nations Unies en République Démocratique du Congo, MONUC), deployed 19 307 personnel. The five largest operations together accounted for 62 per cent of personnel deployed in 2007; these were ISAF, MONUC, NATO’s Kosovo Force (KFOR, with 16 017 personnel), the UN Mission in Liberia (UNMIL, with 15 219 personnel) and the UN Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL, with 13 572 personnel).

Even greater numbers of personnel might have been deployed in 2007 had not several operations encountered significant delays and difficulties in force generation. The AU/UN Hybrid Operation in Darfur (UNAMID), which gradually incorporated the AU Mission in Sudan (AMIS) between October and the end of the year, had an authorized strength of 27 566 personnel but, due to delays in its deployment, had only reached a strength of 7008 at the end of December, including the AMIS personnel. At 1792 troops, the AU Mission in Somalia (AMISOM) also fell far short of its authorized strength of 7650, making it unable to replace Ethiopian troops in Somalia as planned. Two planned EU operations did not open in 2007 due to delays: the Rule of Law Mission in Kosovo (EULEX Kosovo) and EUFOR Tchad/RCA, a protection force in eastern Chad and north-eastern Central African Republic, which was to support UN operations in the region.⁵

In addition to difficulties in reaching their planned personnel strengths, some missions encountered shortfalls in critical equipment in 2007. For example, UNAMID sought an additional 24 helicopters and NATO considering hiring helicopters from the private sector for ISAF. The EU held five force generation conferences to obtain the necessary equipment, such as helicopters for EUFOR Tchad/RCA.⁶

The total known cost of peace operations in 2007 reached $7.1 billion (at constant (2005) prices and exchange rates). The UN, NATO and the EU accounted for $5.7 billion of this total, compared to $5.5 billion in 2006.⁷

Eight peace operations started and five ended in 2007. The UN launched four new operations. Two of these are special political and peacebuilding missions: the UN Integrated Office in Burundi (Bureau Intégré des Nations Unies au Burundi, BINUB)—a follow-on mission to the UN Operation in Burundi (Opération des Nations Unies au Burundi, ONUB)—and the UN Mission in Nepal (UNMIN). The other two are the UN Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad (Mission des Nations Unies en République centrafricaine et au Tchad, MINURCAT) and, jointly with the AU, UNAMID.

Besides UNAMID, the AU launched two new operations. The AU sent troops to Somalia under AMISOM and to the Comoros under the AU Electoral and Security Assistance Mission to the Comoros (Mission d'assistance électorale et sécurité, MAES). The EU launched the EU Police Mission in Afghanistan (EUPOL Afghanistan) and transformed its police mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, EUPOL Kinshasa, into EUPOL RD Congo, signalling the extension of the mission's mandate beyond the country's capital city.

In addition to AMIS and EUPOL Kinshasa, three operations terminated in 2007. After 16 years, the EU closed its observer mission in the Western Balkans, the EU Monitoring Mission (EUMM). The Organization of American States (OAS) closed its Special Mission for Strengthening Democracy in Haiti in 2007 and the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) closed its Mission to Croatia at the end of December 2007.

⁵ EUFOR Tchad/RCA was launched on 28 Jan. 2008.

⁷ These figures greatly underestimate the true costs of peace operations because of gaps in the available data and the wide variety of budgetary and cost-sharing practices used in different missions. See section III below.

II. Regional developments

Six of the eight new peace operations in 2007 were in Africa, taking the overall number of peace operations in the region to 18 (see table 3A.1), three more than in 2006. The other two were in Asia. Europe continues to be the region with the highest number of peace operations, at 20.

Most of the peace operations in Europe were conducted by regional organizations and alliances, principally the OSCE. The UN continues to be the main actor in Africa, with 10 operations—the highest number of UN peace operations in one region—and 58 076 personnel, 85 per cent of all personnel deployed in the region.

In 2007, 41 per cent of all personnel were deployed to operations in Africa. Another 27 per cent were deployed in Asia, the great majority of whom were the 41 741 troops participating in ISAF. The third largest number of personnel was deployed in Europe.

The rest of this section briefly discusses some of the significant developments in the area of peacekeeping in each world region during 2007.

Africa

The Darfur region of Sudan and the neighbouring areas of eastern Chad and north-eastern Central African Republic were the focus of attention in 2007, with the launches of UNAMID and MINURCAT and the delayed launch of EUFOR Tchad/RCA.⁸ Two operations conducted by the AU elsewhere in Africa—AMISOM and MAES—had difficulty fulfilling their mandates.

AMISOM, which was tasked to support the reconciliation process and contribute to overall security in Somalia, was supposed to replace Ethiopian troops backing the Somali Transitional Federal Government in December 2006 but was unable to do so due to the shortfall in personnel.⁹ AMISOM's initial six-month mandate was renewed in August 2007, with the expectation that the operation would later be replaced by a UN operation. Like the operations in Darfur and Chad, AMISOM had to operate in a context of ongoing violence.¹⁰

MAES was the second AU operation deployed to the Comoros within a year. Like its predecessor, the AU Mission for Support to the Elections in the Comoros (AMISEC), MAES consisted of troops sent to monitor elections. MAES was launched in response to violence that erupted in April 2007 following the refusal of Mohamed Bacar to step down as president of the island of Anjouan despite a Comoran Supreme Court ruling that his mandate had expired. Presidential elections were held on Anjouan in June 2007, even though the AU and the Supreme Court demanded a postponement. Bacar claimed to have won 90 per cent of the votes cast, but the election was declared null and void.¹¹ In October 2007 MAES's mandate was expanded to include supporting the implementation of sanctions against Bacar's illegal government and disarming Anjouan's gendarmerie, along with facilitating a new round of free and fair elections. At the end of 2007 MAES troops had still not been deployed on Anjouan.

The Americas

During 2007 the OAS incorporated its Special Mission for Strengthening Democracy in Haiti into the OAS Haiti country office as part of a drive to consolidate the organization's activities in the country. The OAS Mission to Support the Peace Process in Colombia (Misión de Apoyo al Proceso de Paz de la Organización de Estados Americanos, MAPP/OEA) opened three new field offices and increased its contingent of observers in 2007. This continued a process of extending the mission's geographic coverage that began in 2006. MAPP/OEA, which is mandated to monitor and verify the demobilization, disarmament and reintegration process and law and order, now covers the whole of Colombia.

Asia

In response to continuing instability in Afghanistan, the international community redoubled its efforts to strengthen the rule of law in the country. In June 2007 the EU launched EUPOL Afghanistan, which took over from a German police reform project.¹² The mission has a three-year mandate to advise, monitor, mentor and train the Afghan National Police, and to contribute to an overall strategy on police reform. It is deployed in Kabul and alongside the regional commands and provincial reconstruction teams of ISAF. However, in its first few months the operation encountered difficulties typical of the international engagement in Afghanistan in 2007: a shortfall of personnel—by the end of 2007 EUPOL Afghanistan had not reached half of its authorized strength of 195—and tensions due to the lack of a common strategy among different countries.¹³

The second new operation in Asia was UNMIN. The mission was established at the invitation of the Nepalese Government and the Communist Party of Nepal (Maoist) after the signing of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) in November 2006.¹⁴ It was initially given a one-year mandate and deployment began in January 2007. UNMIN's tasks include: to assist in monitoring the ceasefire agreement and in implementing and monitoring the agreement on the management of arms and armed personnel; and to support the election of an assembly to draft a new national constitution. In the first half of the year, UNMIN started to register weapons and monitor their storage. Later it oversaw the destruction of improvised explosive devices and completed the registration of Maoist personnel. The elections for the assembly had to be postponed twice due to political tensions between the parties to the CPA. They were rescheduled for April 2008. During 2007 the peace process was accompanied by rising violence among marginalized groups throughout Nepal.¹⁵

Europe

In 2007, 11 of the 20 peace operations in Europe were carried out in the former Yugoslavia. The EU Planning Team in Kosovo (EUPT Kosovo), established in April 2006 in preparation for an eventual EU crisis management operation in the area, was active in 2007.¹⁶ The team, which consisted of about 80 personnel, consulted with representatives of the international community, Kosovar institutions and other local stakeholders to ensure a smooth handover of responsibilities from the UN Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) to EULEX Kosovo and local institutions. This mission started at the beginning of 2008 (and hence is not included in table 3A.2), has an authorized strength of 1900 and will comprise international police, judges, prosecutors and customs officials.¹⁷ As such, it will be the largest civilian peace operation ever conducted by the EU.

With the improved security situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the EU approved the reduction in EUFOR ALTHEA's troop numbers from around 6000 to about 2500 in early 2007.

The Middle East

The Rafah border crossing point between Egypt and the Gaza Strip was closed after Hamas took control of the Gaza Strip in June 2007. The EU Border Assistance Mission Rafah (EU BAM Rafah)—which is mandated to monitor, verify and evaluate the performance of Palestinian Authority border control, security and customs officials at the Rafah crossing point—was suspended from 13 June and its personnel contingent cut from 72 to 33. However, the EU confirmed its commitment to further supporting the Palestinian Authority by maintaining the mission's capacity to redeploy and proceed with its mandate. After 13 June EU BAM Rafah personnel worked on capacity building projects, partly in support of the EU Police Mission in the Palestinian Territories (EUPOL COPPS). EUPOL COPPS came close to reaching its authorized strength of 33 during 2007, and continued to assist the Palestinian Civil Police to establish sustainable policing arrangements.

III. Table of multilateral peace operations

Table 3A.2 provides data on the 61 multilateral peace operations that were active during 2007, including operations that terminated during the year. The table lists missions that were conducted under the authority of the United Nations and operations conducted by regional organizations and alliances or by non-standing (ad hoc) coalitions of states that were sanctioned by the UN or authorized by a UN Security Council resolution, with the stated intention to: (a) serve as an instrument to facilitate the implementation of peace agreements already in place, (b) support a peace process, or (c) assist conflict-prevention or peacebuilding efforts.

SIPRI uses the UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) description of peacekeeping as a mechanism to assist conflict-ridden countries to create conditions for sustainable peace. It may include monitoring and observing ceasefire agreements; serving as confidence-building measures; protecting the delivery of humanitarian assistance; assisting with the demobilization and reintegration processes; strengthening institutional capacities in the areas of judiciary and the rule of law (including penal institutions), policing, and human rights; electoral support; and economic and social development. The table thus covers a broad range of peace operations, reflecting the growing complexity of operation mandates and the potential for operations to change over time. The table does not include good offices, fact-finding or electoral assistance operations, nor does it include peace operations comprising non-resident individuals or teams of negotiators, or operations not sanctioned by the UN.¹⁸

The operations are grouped by the entity conducting them and listed chronologically by launch date within these groups. UN operations are divided into three groups. The first includes 16 observer and multidimensional peace operations run by the DPKO. The second includes five special political missions and peacebuilding missions. The AU/UN Hybrid Operation in Darfur is given its own group. The next seven groups include operations conducted or led by regional organizations or alliances: three by the AU; one by the Economic and Monetary Community of Central African States (Communauté Economique et Monétaire d'Afrique Centrale,

CEMAC); three by the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS), including two carried out by Russia under bilateral arrangements; 10 by the EU; three by NATO; two by the OAS; and 11 by the OSCE. The final group includes six UN-sanctioned operations conducted by ad hoc coalitions of states.

Missions that were initiated in 2007 and new states joining an existing mission are shown in bold type. Operations and individual state participation that ended in 2007 are shown in italic type. Designated lead states (those that either have operational control or contribute the most personnel) in missions with a military or police component are underlined.

The legal instruments underlying the establishment of an operation—UN Security Council resolutions or formal decisions by regional organizations—and the start dates for the operations (the dates of the first deployments) are given in the first column.

The figures for approved personnel numbers listed are those most recently authorized. Numbers of volunteers and locally recruited support staff are not included in the table but, where available, are given in the notes. Data on national breakdowns of civilian staff are only partially available for UN missions. Complete information on national contributions to the missions can be found in the SIPRI Multilateral Peace Missions Database.¹⁹

Mission fatalities since the beginning of the mission and in 2007 are reported. Causes of death—whether accidental, by hostile act or through illness—as reported during 2007 are also recorded. Causes of death have not been reported for all deaths in 2007, so these figures do not always add up to the total number of deaths in 2007.

Cost figures are presented in millions of US dollars at current prices. The budget figures given are for the calendar year of 2007, rather than for financial years, in order to allow comparison of operations. Costs for the calendar year are calculated on the assumption of an even rate of spending throughout the financial year. Budgets set in currencies other than the US dollar are converted based on the International Monetary Fund's aggregated market exchange rates for 2007.²⁰

The cost figures provided for UN and OSCE operations are the amounts budgeted for the year. The figures provided for other operations represent actual spending. The cost figures presented for UN operations are the core operational costs, which include the cost of deploying personnel, per diems for deployed personnel and direct non-field support costs (e.g. requirements for the support account for peacekeeping operations and the UN logistics base in Brindisi, Italy). The costs of UN peacekeeping operations are shared by all UN member states through a specially derived scale of assessed contributions that takes no account of their participation in the missions. Special political and peacebuilding missions are funded through regular budget assessments. UN peacekeeping budgets do not cover programmatic costs, such as those for disarmament, demobilization and reintegration, which are financed by voluntary contributions.

The cost figures given for operations conducted by regional organizations and alliances, such as the EU and NATO, refer only to common costs. These include mainly the running costs of the EU and NATO headquarters (i.e. the costs for civilian personnel and operation and maintenance costs) and investment in the infrastructure necessary to support the mission. The costs of deploying personnel are borne by individual contributing states and are not reflected in the figures given here. Most EU missions are financed in one of two ways: civilian missions are funded through the Community Budget, while military missions or missions with military components are funded through the Athena mechanism, to which only the participating member states contribute.²¹

For CIS missions there is no designated common budget and countries participating in the missions bear the costs of troop deployments. In operations conducted or led by other organizations, such as by the OAS or ad hoc coalitions, budget figures for missions may include programme implementation.

For all these reasons, budget figures presented in table 3A.2 should be viewed as estimates and the budgets for different operations should not be compared.

Unless otherwise stated, all figures in the table are as of 31 December 2007 or, in the case of operations that were terminated in 2007, the date of closure.

Data on multilateral peace operations are obtained from the following categories of open source: (a) official information provided by the secretariat of the organization concerned; (b) information provided by missions themselves, either in official publications or in written responses to annual SIPRI questionnaires; and (c) information from national governments contributing to the mission in question.²² These primary sources are supplemented with a wide selection of publicly available secondary sources consisting of specialist journals; research reports; news agencies; and international, regional and local newspapers.

²² In some instances additional information on the mission is obtained through telephone interviews by SIPRI staff.
